Aquatic Development Group To Build Indoor Waterpark At New Kalahari Resort in Ohio

(Orlando, FL) The Aquatic Development Group (ADG) (www.aquaticgroup.com) will design, engineer and build an 80,000 square foot indoor waterpark at the new African-themed Kalahari Resort to open in Sandusky, Ohio. Aquatic Development Group's construction of the new Kalahari Resort indoor waterpark will once again break new ground, both literally and figuratively, as its creative design will incorporate the equivalent entertainment value found in much larger outdoor waterparks into a streamlined indoor footprint.

When it opens in the summer of 2005, the new Kalahari indoor waterpark will be the largest built at one-time and will prominently feature a double FlowRider® flowboarding system designed to cater to the boardsport demographic. All water features will be maintained by first-class Whitten® filtration systems.

ADG worked closely with Todd Nelson, President and CEO of Kalahari Resorts, to create a master conceptual plan for the indoor waterpark. "The Aquatic Development Group has a good reputation in the industry," said Todd Nelson, President and CEO of Kalahari Resorts. "They were doing neat stuff in outdoor waterparks and I wanted to get some fresh ideas." The Aquatic Development Group's decades of experience in waterparks is propelling the company into an industry leadership position in indoor waterpark design and construction.

ADG's vertical integration will allow it to provide comprehensive services for the seamless transition of every phase of the Kalahari Resort indoor waterpark project from creative design to quality equipment, and on time.
